Will Be Buried This Afternoon

Funeral of Late D. K. Warren to Take Place From The Family
Home on West Side

The funeral of the late D. K. Warren will be held today from the family home at Warrenton. A special train bearing a funeral party from Astoria will leave the foot of Eleventh street at 1:30 p. m. The services at the home will be conducted by Rev. Henry Marcotte, of the First Presbyterian church, and the services at the grave will be private.

The body will be laid to rest on the wooded sand point just north of the home—a beautiful spot selected by Mr. Warren himself as the place of interment.

SENATOR FULTON'S TRIBUTE

Career of the Man Who Had Helped To Build the West.

"D. K. Warren is dead," were the sad words the wires brought to this city last evening, and immediately from residence to residence, over the telephone lines, in broken accents bespeaking the deep sorrow of the senders, went the mournful message, until all the city knew the great loss this community had sustained. There was weeping in many households, sorrow in all when the message was received, for no man has been more highly honored and respected, few indeed so highly, as was Mr. Warren by the people of this section of our state throughout all the years of the half century and more he had resided here. All were his friends, for he was a friend of all men, but there are many whose great privilege it was to have sustained to him that relation we term personal friendship. To them the message came freighted with deeper sorrow and a keener sense of irreparable loss. They knew, as others could not, how kind a heart had ceased to beat, how great a spirit had taken its flight. The death of a good man—of one ever "pure in his purpose, strong in his strife"—is at all times a distinct misfortune, particularly to those residing in the vicinity of his life's activities; not alone, nor indeed, chiefly, because of the bruised hearts and broken ties of love and friendship his death bequeathed, but because of the influence for good, for the welfare of society, such a life exerts.

Wise in counsel, courageous in action, in misfortune and adversity cheerful and undaunted, Mr. Warren was ever a leader in whom his friends and neighbors had perfect confidence and reposed perfect trust. He was public spirited and generous to a fault. Every public movement in the interests of, and important to, the people found him at its head. The needy and unfortunate never appealed to him in vain. A strong man and a lovable character in every station in life, public or private, it is no surprise to those who knew him that his death has cast so great a sorrow over this community.

Mr. Warren was one of the pioneers of Oregon, one of those who assisted in reclaiming this country from the wilderness and savagery and in laying the foundation for the states he lived to see erected thereon. His life was one of exceptional industry and activity. It was a successful life, successful far beyond that attained by the average man, that is, he accomplished more in the way of aiding in the upbuilding of society and the community where he lived, as well as in the narrower field of acquiring wealth. He accumulated and left his family a considerable fortune by reason of his industry, frugality, and intelligence, but, what is more to us and dearer far to them, he left them the priceless treasure of an untarnished name and the memory of a useful life.

All that Mr. Warren accomplished, and it was much, he accomplished in the face of great obstacles and under many and great disadvantages. There is no better reason for our young people than the story of his life. I have not space here to give it, save in an outline.

Mr. Warren was born at Bath, New York, on the 12th day of March, 1826. On the 23rd day of August, 1837, his father died, leaving his wife practically without any means, with four children to support, the eldest of whom was less than 6 years of age. At the age of 13 young Daniel went out into the world to make his own living. He hired out to work on a farm for $11 a month, the price then paid for a bodied man for the same work, which indicates how highly he was esteemed even at that tender age by those who knew him. He worked on the farm during the summers for wages and attended school during the winters, working nights, mornings and Saturdays for his board and lodging for three years. And when he came to settle up with his employer, so faithful and diligent had he been that he was allowed $12 a month, instead of $11.

From New York his mother and family had moved to Illinois and it was there he worked on the farm. In 1852, he and his three brothers, P. C. Warren, Frank and George Warren, crossed the plains to Oregon, arriving at Portland September 9, 1852. He and his brothers then separated, Daniel going alone to the mines in southern Oregon, he being then but 16 years of age. How courageous and self-reliant he must have been can only be understood by those who know the conditions of the country in those days. In 1853 he came to Astoria, his worldly possessions consisting of the clothes he wore and $3 in his pocket. With some slight interruptions, he thereafter made his home in this vicinity. In 1860 he visited his old home in Illinois and there met and became engaged to Miss Sarah Eaton. They were married on the 24th day of February, 1863, at 8 o'clock in the morning, and left on their long journey for Oregon at noon of the same day. That the marriage was a fortunate one we, their neighbors, all know. The wife was in every respect worthy of the husband—more cannot be said. Together they have traveled along life's highway for 40 years. Mr. Warren left surviving him four children, namely: Mrs. H. C. Thompson, Mrs. C. R. Higgins, George W. Warren and Frederick L. Warren. The distinguishing characteristics of Mr. Warren were integrity and honesty of the highest order; energy, unconquerable will and steadfastness of purpose, with exceptional powers of mental concentration. He was, however, of a diffident and retiring disposition. He never pushed himself forward, but was confident and self-reliant and ready to lead when called upon to do so. He had no desire for public office and could seldom be prevailed upon to allow his name to be used by his party. Several times, however, his reluctance in that regard was overcome by the importunities and demands of his fellow citizens and he served with great credit to himself and his constituents as county commissioner for several terms as a member of the Astoria common council several years and as state senator for four years. In whatever field he worked, public or private, he won success, and the world is better because of his life. He contributed to the sum of human happiness much and detracted from it not at all. He left in his works much of good, and nothing of evil.

C. W. FULTON.

First Work at Big Hume Mill

Test of The Machinery Yesterday
Proved Successful In Every Particular

The big Hume mill yesterday sawed its first stick of timber. At 2 o'clock the signal was given to start the machinery by Millwright Winters, and a fine spruce log, 30 feet in length, was hauled from the water, placed in position on the carriage and run through the saws. There was not a hitch of any kind, the machinery working perfectly in every department.

Nearly 200 persons, including members of the city council, were present to witness the commencement of work. George W. Hume, the veteran capitalist, came up from California especially for the purpose of witnessing the event and his son, Will R. Hume, upon whom management of the mill will devolve, was also present. In the party were most of the prominent men of the city. The new mill is equipped with all the modern machinery known to the lumbering industry, and it has been aptly said that it is the very finest plant of the kind in the world. No expense has been spared in its construction, and, when everything is in readiness for operations, the mill, box factory, kilns and other buildings will have entailed an expenditure of nearly $300,000. The mill site contains 20 acres and is admirably situated, enjoying unsurpassed water and rail facilities.

Actual operations will be commenced on Tuesday with a force of 125 men, and the lumber necessary for the building yet to be erected will be turned out. When the buildings are completed the plant will be operated to its full capacity—125,000 feet in 10 hours.

NEW OYSTER COMPANY

Harrison J. Hamblet and Herbert M. Bransford, of this city, are the principal officers of the Northern Oyster Company, just incorporated under the laws of Pacific county, Wash. C. A. Truesdale, of Vancouver, Washington, is the third incorporator.

The capital stock of the new concern is placed at $65,000 and the principal office will be located at Bay Center. It is reported that the new company has merged with the firm of A. S. Bush & Sons, and that operations will be conducted on a large scale.

The Northern Oyster Company will grow Toke Point oysters, as the transplanted eastern oysters have become to be called.

WEST END CUTTING SCRAPE

Albert Simen is locked up in the county jail to await trial before the circuit court on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon. He was remanded in default of $250 bonds. Simen and Frank Ruckman, the victim of his assault, became involved in a drunken row at the Eagle saloon, West Astoria. Simen drawing a knife and slashing the hand of Ruckman, injuring him slightly. He was given a preliminary hearing before Justice Goodman yesterday and bound over for trial.

CAPTAIN REYNOLDS' CASE DROPPED

Dr. Earle yesterday received telegraphic instructions from Washington that Capt. Reynolds could not be prosecuted for breach of the marine health regulations. The captain, it will be remembered, came ashore from his vessel before she had been inspected by the local quarantine officer. The telegraphic message says that the regulations do not apply to Nushagak, which is held to be a coastwise port. Dr. Earle is also acquainted with the fact that the new regulations make it necessary for him to report all such cases to Washington, instead of to the United States attorney. Full information has been forwarded to Dr. Earle by mail.

MISS LULU HENDERSON DEAD

A telegram was received in the city yesterday from Maine announcing the death of Miss Lulu Henderson who moved from Astoria to the New England states with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Henderson. Before coming to this city the family lived near Olney on a large farm. Miss Henderson died consumption.

Arrested on Rape Charge

Serious Accusation Against Frank
Adams, Who is Now in Jail
Awaiting Trial

Frank Adams, a waiter, was arrested yesterday on the serious charge of rape. He is now locked up in the county jail, in default of $1,000 bonds, to appear Tuesday before Justice Goodman for preliminary hearing. D. E. Huntman, also a waiter, is held as witness against Adams, and is in jail in default of $250 bonds.

The complaint filed against the man in the justice's court recites that the crime was committed on the night of August 31, when Adams is alleged to have enticed a 15-year old girl to his apartment. The child is the daughter of a well-known resident and her home is near the postoffice. She made a full statement of the case to Deputy District Attorney Eakin.

Adams and Huntman were both employed at the Occident. They went to work just before the regatta. On the night of August 31 Huntman saw the child in Adams' room, but said nothing of the matter until yesterday. It appears there is a difference between the men on account of a small debt owed by Adams, and that his failure to pay the sum, said to be $3.50, prompted Huntman to acquaint the authorities with the facts in the case.

The complaint is sworn to by the father of the girl, although Huntman himself expressed a desire to bring the charge.

From what can be learned, the girl first met Adams at the corner of Bond and Ninth streets, while a merry-go-round was here. The corner in question was the rendezvous of a large number of young people. On the night of the crime Adams sought to induce the girl to drink some liquor that he had in his room, but she refused to do so.

The authorities say they have a clear case against Adams, who is only about 26 years of age.

ENTERTAINED AT DOMINOES

Mrs. Harry Bell and Mrs. Frank Gunn entertained delightfully at dominoes Friday afternoon. The tally cards were charming little kodak scenes of the town made by Alfred Tee. The first prize was won by Miss Llonberger. This was a dainty souvenir book of the regatta. The guests were Mesdames C. S. Brown, W. Logan, S. Moddock, O. West, Norman Marrs, A. V. Allen, R. E. Carruthers, W. W. Ridehalgh and Misses Alice Woods, Ruth Garner, Eliza Boelling, Violet Bowley, Rosa Hobson, Harriet Tallant, Stella Spedden Clara Llonberger, Pearl Cole.

KILLED BIG ELK

Sheriff Linville returned yesterday from an outing on the Nasel, in Pacific county, Wash. The sheriff went over in quest of bear, but instead succeeded in killing a large elk. The elk was pronounced by settlers in the region to be the largest ever seen in Southwestern Washington. There were nine prongs on each of his antlers and he was indeed a fine specimen of his kind. Sheriff Linville brought over a quantity of meat and distributed it among his friends.

MADE FINAL PROOF

W. W. Whipple has made final proof in support of his homestead entry before County Clerk Clinton. Mr. Whipple's claim is in section 33, township 7 north of range 6 west, and contains 160 acres.

EXTENDED WATER MAIN

The Astoria water commissioners have completed the East Astoria extension of the water main. The pressure is highly satisfactory and Chief Stockton, after testing it, says ample fire protection will be accorded.

ASTORIAN SERIOUSLY ILL

Benjamin G. Anstadt, a well known resident of East Astoria, is seriously ill at a Portland hospital. Mr. Anstadt is suffering from tumor of the liver and his condition is said to be critical.
